To Whom It May Concern

A labored article in last week's "Valley Independent," bearing the earmarks of the workmanship of more than one individual, makes a demand upon the ex-treasurer of the municipality of Glendale to refund to taxpayers, money which he has "illegally drawn." There is no claim made that good service was not rendered for the money received as treasurer for the year, nor that any taxpayer has been defrauded to the extent of a penny. The total amount he received for his services as treasurer, by the way, was $78.27. The additional amount which he received as tax collector, was $100. He sought neither position; in fact, the business of collecting taxes was put upon him without his previous knowledge or expectation. When the fact was brought to his attention that his business dealings with the city was apparently and technically contrary to the provisions of the statutes, he resigned from the official honors which had been thrust upon him and dropped back into the honorable obscurity which hedges the citizen of Glendale, who is not an office holder or a professional "kicker."

The law in question is a good law, intended primarily to apply to the legislative and administrative officers of the city—not to an officer who, like the treasurer, has no voice in the control of the municipality. Yet, of course, it could be invoked in his case when the occasion might require it.

* * *

The above was put into type two weeks ago as portion of an article in reply to the editorial alluded to, but was laid aside for satisfactory reasons. The communication over the signature of Charles E. Stanley in last week's Independent furnishes testimony as to the source of the inspiration of the first attack upon me.

It was, as suspected, this same Charles E. Stanley, who now flatters himself that the allusion to himself as "Cirizen Fixit" was inspired by "spite." I absolve Mr. Stanley from any charge of having injured me in any way and therefore owe him nothing in the nature of spite. He has done me, the honor of classing me with other good citizens whom he has served up with choice vituperation, inelegant, obscene and profane, upon the curbstone and in button-hole conferences; but this sort of thing seems to relieve his alleged mind and is quite harmless to its objects.

As for applying "Citizen Fixit" to this personage, I confess that it may be misleading, for I have known that appellation to be bestowed upon very honorable gentlemen.

Mr. Stanley states what is false when he says "Sherer has in his possession money belonging to the taxpayers of the City of Glendale." The statement is not even technically true; and most assuredly I do think that the trustees, not being imbeciles, will make no demand for it.

It was not necessary for the trustees or any one of them to request my resignation, nor did they do so. Can Mr. Stanley say the same in regard to the office of City Recorder? or did they demand his resignation because they deemed him unfit?

If Mr. Stanley is aching to bask in the limelight of publicity I may have to accord him still more space, but I confess that he is a rather nauseating subject.

AN ORGAN PARTY.

Persons, or companies, on pleasure bent, go sometimes one way and sometimes another.

A group of Glendale folks set out on Saturday last to see and hear what they could. The company consisted of Miss Judson Harris, acting as conductor; Miss Lillian Ward, organist of the Glendale M. E. Church; Miss Ruth Byram, one of the organists of the Presbyterian Church; Mrs. C. W. Croll, a former pipe organist and teacher; Miss Alma Croll, an enthusiastic lover of music, and Mrs. J. F. McIntyre and her music-loving sons, Percy and Wilmot.

Their objective point was the Murray M. Harris organ factory, corner Alhambra and Sichel streets, Los Angeles, where a large organ, soon to be installed in the new First Presbyterian Church of Pasadena, is now ready for inspection, though not yet fully completed.

The party were first conducted through the several departments of the factory, observing the processes of construction of some of the numerous factors that go to make up the complete instrument.

When the hearing was to begin they were conducted inside the main body of the organ, where they needed no ear trumpets to catch the sounds from the wilderness of pipes by which they were surrounded.

Returning to the outer world they found two other companies of visitors, later arrivals, who with them listened to the playing of the noted Handel's Largo and the Priest's March, from Atholia, and other less massive performances.

The Pasadena organ has nearly 4300 pipes, ranging in length from three-fourths of an inch to thirty-two feet, and it has 62 speaking stops.

Condensing from the running remarks and explanations of Mr. Harris at intervals in the course of the visit, the following points may be given: The measure of the size of an organ is not the size of its case, nor even the number of its pipes; but the number of its speaking stops. A speaking stop controls a whole set of pipes of one stop; and to say that an organ has a given number of speaking stops is the same as to say that an orchestra or band has a given number of men or instruments. Some stops require a larger number of pipes than others.

As compared with other organs this is somewhat larger than the famous Salt Lake organ, and about one-fourth smaller than that in Temple Auditorium in Los Angeles.

So that tourists who come to us with the impression that the Salt Lake organ is the largest in this country—or in the world, as the case may be—may hear two that are larger right in Los Angeles, besides 100 others in other cities in our land. The matchless acoustic properties of the Mormon Tabernacle afford much of the charm of that widely known instrument.

THE GLENDALE FREE LIBRARY BECOMES A PUBLIC LIBRARY.

An important step in the growth of our city was taken when the council passed an ordinance creating a public library and levied a tax of five and one-half cents on one hundred dollars, which will aggregate about five hundred dollars this year. This is of course a small amount, but larger than the Tuesday Afternoon Club has been able to raise for the work, mostly by individual subscriptions, and which had the disadvantage of a few being obliged to bear the expense of a free institution which was for the benefit of the whole community. For unquestionably a library in a place is taken as something of an index to the character of the people and is a most desirable educational feature which the right kind of homeseekers will not overlook.

For nearly two years the Tuesday Afternoon Club has supplied this advantage by the aid of the State Library Board of Trustees, which fosters library interests and development throughout the state by sending out traveling libraries to small and remote places. These traveling libraries have formed a nucleus around which the ladies of the Tuesday Afternoon Club have gathered two hundred volumes by gift from interested citizens, and these, in turn, will form a nucleus for the public library over which our little municipality will now have a fostering care.

On Monday afternoon the ladies composing the traveling library board of trustees representing the Tuesday Afternoon Club met by request of the city trustees at the city hall for the purpose of conferring in regard to library matters.

The ladies expressed hearty appreciation of the action of the council towards which goal the ladies had looked forward, but had refrained from making any formal request.

Upon the invitation of Mrs. Witham, president of the library trustees, the city trustees proceeded to the library room, where they expressed themselves as pleased with what had been accomplished by the club. It is probable that the library will remain where it is until the city engine house is built, when it is expected that suitable quarters will be provided on the second floor, where the capacity of the library will be increased according to the finances available. In California public libraries are established by law under the supervision of the library board of trustees of the state, which has a complete and thoroughly organized system for fostering the growth and furthering the benefits of libraries. Borrowers from a public library have the privilege of borrowing through the home library from the state library books which the home library does not contain; this privilege of having access to the choice collection of books at the state capital is one which students appreciate.

The Glendale public library will be conducted by the following board of library trustees: Mrs. Lillian S. Wells, Mrs. Ella C. Witham, Mrs. Eleanor R. Blackburn, Mr. E. D. Goode, Dr. A. L. Bryant.

GLENDALE, CAL., OCTOBER 5, 1907

What is the Lincoln-Roosevelt Republican League doing these days?

As it was organized for the avowed purpose of putting the railroad company out of control of the Republican organization in California, it ought to be getting down to business, as the time for the campaign before it is none too long.

Get a start, gentlemen; the railroad is still doing business at the old stand!

Assessments and Taxes

Official figures given by County Auditor Dow show a grand total of assessment values in Los Angeles county to be $375,719,358, an increase of $70,000,000 over last year.

Glendale taxpayers should note that the tax rate in the county is 70 cents on the hundred lower within the boundaries of incorporated cities than it is outside. The Glendale city tax rate being 85 cents, our local self government is costing 15 cents on each hundred dollars of valuation, with some slight addition in cases where the city has raised the value of the assessment over the county's figures.

The total assessed valuation of Glendale property (City of Glendale assessment) is $961,865, and the total tax to be collected is $8175.79, an increase of almost $2000 over the amount collected last year.

The Question of Stewardship

That was a notable sermon preached by the Bishop of London shortly after his arrival in New York a week ago, to an audience composed quite largely of the very rich.

The text was old: "Give an account of thy stewardship," and the application of it was not new, for it is a very apparent one. But the circumstances give it a more than usually powerful application.

The force of the text will be lost in practical life, however, if it is made to apply to the very rich only. The same question of stewardship, as the bishop stated, comes home to all. After speaking of the vast number of poor people in London, the bishop said:

"Let the minority, who are not in need, see that they make good use of their benefactions for the majority who are without these gifts."

To the neglect of their opportunities by the rich, the bishop attributed the growth of socialism. He said:

"The blatant and aggressive socialism that has spread its unhealthy shadow over Europe and, I believe, over America, is due to the neglect of these Christian principles of stewardship, just as the wild extravagances of Christian Science are due to the neglect of the sound principles of Christian healing."

Poor Fairbanks

Vice-president Fairbanks was undoubtedly born under an unlucky star. First he was ridiculed as a confirmed drinker of buttermilk and handicapped in the race for the presidential nomination thereby, and now he is under the ban of the Methodist church for ordering cocktails for some one else to drink.

Apropos of Fairbanks, the conduct of the editorial department of the New York Sun is interesting to note in these times. This is one of the best edited papers in America, and is supposed to be owned by J. Pierrepont Morgan, in part, at least.

In times not very long gone by it has had much to say in praise of President Roosevelt, altho always with a reservation implied. At the same time it has been persistent in its ridicule of the great buttermilk drinker.

Recently, however, its references to Roosevelt have not been consistent with its former praise, and fun at the expense of Fairbanks no longer bubbles up through its columns of English undefiled. Fairbanks is known to be in favor with the railroad interests, and there is a strong probability that they would attempt to nominate and elect him if in their power to do so. He had practically been ridiculed out of the race, however, even before the Methodist church jumped on his attenuated form, and it is interesting to watch the course of events from day to day and attempt to pick out the winner in the contest for the railroads' favor; and the course of journals so closely allied to railroad interests as the New York Sun will afford interesting pastime to the observer of current politics.

Criticism and Fault Finding

These terms are frequently confounded in the minds of many people to such an extent that their only conception of the duty of a critic is that his sole business is to find flaws and denounce them. In the opinion of this class of citizens, the best critic is the one who is the most voluble in denouncing wrong doing, or the one who finds no good in anything that does not accord with his own particular views.

These alleged critics are of two types: First, the really honest and well-meaning citizen with a torpid liver and a poor digestion who see the world through a blue haze and from a narrow viewpoint, and whose views are too often tinged with prejudice or personal interest, or who gets his information at second hand and does not investigate for himself; the second type is the designing schemer who for some personal object plays upon the prejudices of a portion of the public by damning things in general, knowing that however foolish and false his assertions, there will yet be found a minority who will accept at least some of them as facts.

A citizen of this description is a pest in a community. His influence is always limited, fortunately, to a minority of the people, but he is always a source of strife and contention and whatever influence he has is for evil. The real critic is the person who not only discovers faults to descant upon, but who also observes something that merits and receives his commendation. When such a critic discovers some real wrong, his opinion carries weight, and as a result the wrong is remedied.

No person is quite so useless in the household or the community as the common scold. The newspaper that finds nothing to commend in the acts of public officials, but always dilates upon their shortcomings, real or imaginary, is a public nuisance. But the life of such publications is usually not long.

A weekly journal of this kind was started up in Los Angeles several years ago. It was filled with "spicy" articles and in the beginning called public attention to some real wrongs on the part of public officials. The first few numbers were bought up eagerly by the public; but its popularity was short lived, for the people soon discovered that the editor never saw good in anything or anybody, and that his opinions and alleged "facts" were consequently valueless.

No one is foolish enough to claim that public officials are above criticism, nor does any sane person expect that the men charged with the administration of public affairs can long exist without making some mistakes; but always the critically disposed should bear in mind that the probabilities are in favor of the theory that public officials are as a rule better informed in regard to the affairs presented to them for action than the majority of their constituents; and just criticism can only be made after a thorough investigation of particular cases. Pre-conceived opinions should have no weight with the impartial critic. Let us relegate to the rear the public scold and the professional fault-finder, but welcome the broad-minded critic of public affairs who allows no personal feeling or cherished theory to bias his judgment.

STORIES OF THE PIONEERS.

NO. IV.

(Concluded from last week)

The Discovery of Gold.

Another interesting story told by Mr. Colton, is in regard to the discovery of gold in California. He says:

"Marshall was not the discoverer of gold in California. They had been finding pieces of it in the mill race at Sutter's mill for some time, but nobody knew what it was. Bill Johnson whom I knew well, was the first man who made the discovery, and when I saw him last, in 1898, he told me the story as he had often told it before.

"Johnson said: 'We had been finding gold right along up there at Sutter's. Marshal and Sutter both said it was only mica. We were working there for a dollar a day and living on beef and beans. I had a nugget in my pocket and I said to the boys:

"'If you will make up a purse I'll take some of this stuff down to Yerba Beuna (San Francisco) and see what it is. Well, they did it and I started off with 16 ounces of it. I walked the whole way, 140 miles. There were three hiders in the bay and I went aboard one of them. The purser was sitting at the table eating his supper. I dumped the stuff out on a tin plate. 'What have you got there,' he said, and then, 'Where did you get it?' I told him I got it about 140 miles north. Then he said: 'You go back and get all you can of it. I'll give you $8 an ounce for it.' Well, that was enough for me. I went back, but I didn't take any to him for $8 an ounce. We went to a bar of the South Fork where Folsom is now, and we took it out in pans full.'" The gold taken out then was coarse grains and small nuggets, nothing smaller than a grain of wheat; no one bothered about the fine gold. Even as late as '53, when Mr. Colton was there, no one cared for fine gold. "Why I have known of twelve oyster cans being filled in one day," he said. Johnson was a Mormon as were the most of his companions, and Mormon Island was named after them. Gold dust was the only currency in use for several years after the discovery; then the first real money that came into circulation was the $100 and $50 "slugs."

In 1853 Mr. Colton secured a contract to carry the mail between Sacramento and Salt Lake; an undertaking accompanied by all sorts of hardship and adventure. Other mail carriers, who were associated with Mr. Colton lost their lives in the service. One of them, Lieut. Cliff, of the Mormon battalion, was captured by Indians and burned at the stake. Months afterwards a party of whites, of which number Mr. Colton was one, captured an Indian who had in his possession the gold case of a watch, with the works removed, that Cliff had on his person when killed. It cost $5.00 to have a letter forwarded across the mountains by pony express in those days. The territory of Nevada had not come into existence and Utah reached westward and joined California on the crest of the Sierras. Mr. Colton acted in the capacity of guide for the government, fought Indians in Utah and in Arizona, drove team, raised cattle, struggled and prospered. He made frequent journeys between the Mormon settlements, Salt Lake and San Bernardino. Sometimes it was a company of emigrants and again a body of soldiers that he piloted over the desert and among the mountains which he became intimately acquainted with. In 1857 he was one of a party of 25 men who made the trip from Salt Lake to North Platt to secure supplies for Brigham Young and his followers. He came to Los Angeles in 1860 and heard Albert Sydney Johnson address the crowd in front of the Bella Union (now the St. Charles Hotel), and announce that he was going to start East to fight for the Confederacy and inviting those who wished to join him, to do so, and in response six men went out with him to fight against the Union. In 1862 Mr. Colton returned to San Bernardino, and was in the freighting business for 22 years, carrying freight for the government and supplies to the mining camps. He was married in 1854, but it cannot fairly be said that he "settled down," for after that important event occurred he was in Oregon, Northern California, Idaho, Colorado and pretty nearly everywhere throughout the West.

One of his sons went down in the Phoenix in San Francisco bay seven years ago. Another was the discoverer of the Searchlight mines, one is at Tonopah and another on the ranch near Burbank. With his wife and grandchildren around him he lives at ease in a pleasant home in Glendale, an encyclopedia of information of the stirring events of the last sixty years upon the coast, giving promise by his appearance of still more years of usefulness.

WEEKLY NEWS LETTER.

Berkeley, Sept. 18, 1907.

The appointment of Professor Wickson as director of the agricultural experiment station by the board of regents has been the cause of much rejoicing in the university. President Wheeler, when speaking of the matter, made the following statement: "The appointment of a head of our agricultural department has been regarded by the president and the board of regents as involving the most responsibility of any recent act. We have believed the agricultural interests of California to be second to none of any State in the country, and these interests to be second to no interest within the State. It has, therefore, been our deliberate purpose to put at the head of the agricultural department the very best man available in the country. A careful and persistent canvass has therefore been made, and neither pains nor time spared. It is our deliberate and unanimous conviction that Professor Wickson is the man who deserves the place. His long experience in the agricultural and horticultural work and needs of the State, and in the peculiar conditions existing under its climate, weigh in the decision. His proved wisdom, his wide acquantance with men and affairs, as well as his special knowledge and organizing ability, come also into the whole. We are making no experiment; he is tested and tried. We propose to give him every support, and to go ahead for the building up of an agricultural department which shall be struck out on large enough lines to be fairly commensurate with the tremendous interests at stake. It is a great satisfaction to us all, in addition to all other considerations, that we are able to assign this post to one who is of our own number and has served the university and the State so long and faithfully."

The authorities of the university have made an investigation of the scholarship records of the athletes of the university for the past two years, and have found some very interesting facts. In the two years 97 freshmen have played on freshman teams, which include football, track and rowing. Of this number but five have failed to come up to the scholarship requirements, which makes a better showing than that among non-athletic students. In the two years 160 men have been either on varsity or freshman track teams, and of this number not a single case of failure in studies has been recorded. The failures of football men have not been any greater than that among the average students of the university. To sum up: the total number of cases investigated was over 200, and the percentage of those who failed to meet the scholarship requirements of the faculty was a little less than five, which is slightly better than the usual record of students in the university.

A very significant thing regarding the student enrollment at Berkeley this year is the continued increase in the percentage of men as compared with women. This year sixty-two per cent. of the regular undergraduate body are men. Last year the percentage was fifty-nine, and the year before fifty-seven. The total enrollment at the University of California, graduate and undergraduate, is 2598, as against 2474 a year ago at this time. The increased number of men does not seem to be due to any disinclination on the part of women to attend the university, but rather to the new fields opening up to men. In the last few years the university has developed new courses in commerce, architecture, irrigation, forestry, sanitary engineering, electricity and mining engineering.

The Irony of Fate

The irony of fate was never better exemplified than in a recent occurrence at Long Beach. It was at the M. E. church quarterly conference and a board of stewards was to be chosen. Among the names proposed, with apparently a certainty of election was that of R. H. Young, a former resident of this city. Mr. Young will be remembered as a pillar of the church while here, and one of the leaders in the reform temperance movement. He was one of the most aggressive workers of the anti-saloon league, and secretary of that organization.

In that capacity he carried on an unceasing, merciless, and sometimes successful, campaign against all saloons, gambling joints, houses of ill fame and Chinese lotteries. He was especially bitter against blind pigs, and the mere mention of his name made the keepers of these illicit resorts tremble. It was largely owing to his untiring efforts that the screen ordinance and the Sunday closing ordinance became laws in this city. No man was so thoroughly hated by the liquor interests as Mr. Young and it will come as a surprise, especially to these, that the opposition to Mr. Young's election as one of the stewards of the church arose from the fact that he openly favored the granting of liquor licenses to hotels in Long Beach, that wine might be served to those wishing it at meals.

If there is more rejoicing in heaven over the conversion of a sinner than there is in the righteousness of a hundred saints what hallelujahs must the angels be singing these days. The conversion of Mr. Young to a temperate view of temperance is a good sign. It shows that a truer conception of what constitutes genuine temperance is beginning to be entertained by practical temperance workers, and that a broader view of the subject may replace before long the narrow and prejudiced ideas heretofore advanced by the advocates of total abstinence.—San Diego Herald.

Change in Pastorate

Rev. C. R. Norton of the Glendale Methodist church preached his farewell sermon to his congregation on September 22d. The Annual Conference has changed Mr. Norton to a new field of usefulness at Cucamonga. Mr. Norton has been a hard and very successful worker in the Glendale field. He found his congregation worshiping in a public hall, and left them established in a place of worship which would be creditable to a city much larger than this. Not only has he built up the material church, but the membership has been wonderfully increased under his pastorate. We wish Bro. Norton and his family continued success and happiness, which is the expression of a very large circle of friends in Glendale.

We believe that the church is to be congratulated upon securing the services of Rev. George R. Graff as a successor to Mr. Norton. Mr. Graff has been a resident of Glendale for over a year and is well acquainted with the field, where he has many friends.

Since the above was put in type, we received word that Rev. George R. Graff was changed at his own request to Highlands, to help effect a necessary general readjustment of several charges. The name of the new pastor of Glendale is not yet announced.

The exhibit consists of 200 large pictures of ancient and modern art and includes brown prints, carbons, engravings, etchings, photogravures and colored fac-similes of famous masterpieces.

The net receipts from the exhibit will be divided between the high school and grammar school and will be devoted to the decoration of the school rooms. It will be a great educational opportunity and it is hoped that our people will give it an appreciative patronage.

At the Country Club

Last Saturday evening the members of the Glendale Country Club invited their gentleman friends to spend the evening with them at their club house on Brand Boulevard. The visitors were most hospitably entertained and the evening passed pleasantly at progressive whist, Mr. J. F. McIntyre coming in with the best score.

In the opinion of the members, the affair lacked only one element of perfection, and so it was decided that on next (this) Saturday evening, ladies would also be included in the invitation.

M. E. Ladies' Aid Society

On Tuesday afternoon Ladies' Aid of M. E. met for the last time with Mrs. C. R. Norton for a regular meeting. During the social hour many kind and appreciative little speeches were made bespeaking the love of the society members for their faithful co-worker Mrs. Norton. On behalf of the society one of the ladies presented their beloved pastor's wife with a most beautiful white quilt, made by the ladies themselves.

There were a number of pretty gifts notably some handsome linen pieces.

Later a delicious luncheon closed the afternoon and there were tears mingled with smiles when the last good-byes were said, for in the hearts of many of the congregation, Mr. and Mrs. Norton are held very dear.

A very pleasant surprise awaited Miss Ora Jones upon her return home on Saturday from a dinner to which she had been invited in honor of her birthday. She found the rooms filled with gay young people ready with congratulations. A huge birthday-cake surmounted with candles and a very inquisitive question mark (?) was a feature of the fun.

There is Money in Stockings

As well as in old tin cans, under the carpet and hidden about the bed.

But, is it safe?

It may burn or thieves break in and steal.

Why not deposit it in the Bank of Glendale and let them put it in circulation, and at the same time help build up this valley and thus help the community?

Look over our list of directors and say if your money is not just as safe and under as good management as it would be in the largest bank in California. We want your business. 2w23

LAYS OF A QUIET TOWN.

LAY I.

Oh sweet are the joys of the farmer's lad,
As he carols a merry lay,
While he turns the furrow or binds the sheaf,
Or rides on the new mown hay.

But what is that to the pleasure felt
When he's old enough to see
That the real and only joy in life
Is to be a town trustee!

Oh, the town trustee is a merry man,
And a merry man is he.
He throws aside the cares of life
And basks in the sunshine free!

The cares of office he throws aside,
They neither him fright nor fret;
The pangs that pangeth the taxpay—er
He observeth without regret.

Oh, the town trustee's is a joyous life,
The world and its wealth are his'n,
When the people at last essay to sq irm,
He haleth them quick to prison.

He plungeth his fist in the coffers filled
With the gold of the moneyless many,
And when they call for their gold doubloons,
He tosseth them out a penny.

The pirate of old was a harmless wight
As he waded in seas of blood
Compared with the pirate who only smiles
When the critics wade thro mud!

Oh rare is the life of the town trustee,
Which means that its not well done,
But alas and alack for you and me
Who haven't the town to run!

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN WEST GLENDALE.

Albright & Andrews have their new laundry building well under way, about two blocks north of the West Glendale school house. The structure is to be 40 by 140 feet in dimensions and will be only one story in heighth at present. Some of their machinery has already been delivered. A steam boiler of 40 horse power capacity will, among other uses, be made to furnish power for their own electricity, which will be used in lighting. The building is placed on a good concrete foundation, stands on the corner of Woolacott street and is very well situated for its purpose. The proprietors expect to open up for business about November 1st.

Just west of the laundry is the Oliver West Glendale Tract, which is beginning a building boom that promises well for this hitherto somewhat neglected section. Mr. Beal is putting up a neat cottage to cost about $1700.

Mr. Howe has an attractive bungalow well under way, that will cost $2000. There are concrete foundations laid for five more houses which will be pushed forward rapidly, and more are to follow very soon. Mr. Charles Hooker, of Los Angeles, is the contractor who is doing the building.

WEST GLENDALE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

This school, which last year had 95 pupils enrolled, starts in this year with only 56. The decrease in number is owing principally to the fact that quite a large number of pupils from the Glendale School District attended the West Glendale school last year as a matter of courtesy on the part of the trustees of that district; this privilege has been withdrawn this year, as during a good part of last term the school was crowded too much for good work. There is quite a building boom starting up in this section, and the attendance is likely to be very materially increased during the term. Miss Nellie P. Miller is the principal and Alice Moores, primary teacher. The school starts out in a most satisfactory manner.

GLENDALE GRAMMAR SCHOOL NOTES.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Mrs. Griffith, our county president, gave a very interesting address at the M. E. church, last Sabbath to a very appreciative audience. Nine new members were added to our list. Miss Mary E. Yoe, State "Y" secretary, was also present and gave a short talk on the young people's department, of its influence and benefit to young people in making their lives purer and nobler, and on Monday evening organized a "Y" at the home of Miss Ward, on C street. Mrs. S. H. Payne, of Los Angeles, was also present and favored us with some of her beautiful songs, and on Sunday afternoon led the L. T. L.

Personal enthusiasm and consecration is what we need to put in motion—the forces which must tell for temperance, purity and right. "Woe betide our republic if men cast their ballot while the fumes of alcohol darken their brain."

We are greatly indebted to our president for her untiring efforts. They are an inspiration to us.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

In athletics, the greatest interest of the past week naturally centered around the tennis tournament. In the boys' singles, McPeak lost to Lawrence, of the San Fernando High, but he put up such a strong game that his friends expect to see this result reversed in the future. In the boys' doubles, McPeak and Walton beat Lawrence and Waite, of the San Fernando High. McPeak and Loraine Mitchell, of the 12th year class, won from Roy Morrill and Winifred Sadler, of the 10th. The boys have been putting in some hard work on the new playgrounds on Central avenue.

The students are getting up a proper interest in the approaching art exhibit of the Horace K. Turner pictures and are beginning to work hard to make the affair a success in order to obtain funds for decorating the class rooms.

Four new drafting desks have been added to the furniture of the main assembly room for the use of the class in mechanical drawing. These desks are made to fold up against the wall when not in use, a device rendered quite necessary on account of limited space.

The County Basket Ball League opens on the 12th inst., and the Glendale team will meet the team of the Compton High school at Compton on that date. On the following Saturday the Los Angeles Polytechnic team will play the Glendale team here.

Among the visitors during the week were: Miss Yeo, of the Pasadena W. C. T. U., who spoke to the pupils on Tuesday, and Miss Schwartz, who does the athletics of the Los Angeles High school for the Times. Later, Miss Schwartz attended the tennis tournament.

The attendance kept up even with the last reported record.

OUR FUTURE.

There is a spirit of optimism commingled with the ozone of this section which augurs well for our future. Glendale has so many natural advantages that our hopes are not dependent upon any one thing in particular. In the first place we are located in those alluring "California Foothills" where nature has done so much to make the pursuit of happiness something more than a poetic fancy, "a search for something never to be found," and to place it in the category of the things attainable.

It is a place where "every prospect pleases and only—No, no, my fancy, he is not vile, he is simply suffering from a derangement of the liver caused by eating too much pie! Or the malaria of former environment is not yet worked out of his system, but is being gradually but surely dissipated day by day as he remains among us. Oh, no, dear, old delightful Bishop Heber, he is not "vile," and then that grand old missionary hymn was not intended to apply to us, anyhow!

But, to come back to earth again, where we still do business and must, therefore, make the best of it; material things desirable are constantly coming our way and in the nature of things must do so, for we are right in their course. The merits which we claim for Glendale are not newly discovered, nor special creation, the best of them run back to that period before time was when the morning stars sang together," and the Great Beneficence looking down upon the work of his hands declared that it was good! There, there, come back to earth, my fancy, and let us talk railroad!

The electric line up Verdugo road seems to be practically assured and when in operation will result, we believe, in building up the eastern part of Glendale. The Pasadena-Santa Monica road along Sixth street, is at present only a plausible proposition, but Pasadena people and some of our local men are moving in the matter and we believe it will be an assured fact within two years. A road to Verdugo Park (now Forest Grove) has been determined upon by the parties most interested and if it is not a continuation of the proposed branch of the Los Angeles Railway that is coming up Verdugo road, it will be another connection even more desirable. That the Pacific Electric will be extended westward up the San Fernando Valley to Burbank and beyond, is a probability at least. Then when our population increases to the extent that we anticipated for the next two or three years, it will be a paying proposition to build a line for local travel merely, from the San Fernando road across Fourth or some other central thoroughfare to Verdugo Road or even as far as Eagle Rock.

In fact, we expect to have all the railroads we want to carry us in every direction locally, within the next five years. And the result of this will be the obliteration of the sectional feeling which exists to some extent not only in Glendale, but in every new and growing community where the spirit of individual selfishness invariably to some extent influences public action. At the present time we believe that the spirit prompting us to "get together" is more prevalent than heretofore. Mistakes have been made in the past, but they cannot be corrected by other mistakes to be made henceforth, and this fact is, we believe, being impressed upon us more and more as the days go by, in a manner and to an extent most hopeful. The water question is one that usually causes more or less trouble in new communities where an abundant supply of this great requisite can only be obtained usually by considerable effort. In regard to this subject we are also fortunate. The stream in Verdugo Canyon from which our general supply is drawn, has been proved in the past years of comparatively light rainfall, to be unfailing in its supply and subject to comparatively little variation in quantity. There are promising possibilities of development along this subteranean channel. The wells that have been sunk have generally proved a success, varying in depth and output, but yet always yielding water. A movement is on foot and a company has been organized representing the various water interests, the object of which is consolidation, a measure theoretically and scientifically correct, and which we hope will soon be worked out to a satisfactory conclusion. Our streets are rapidly being transformed and indicate to every observer the fact that we have that proper local pride in our possessions which impels us to keep them looking their best. The home builder is among us and new evidence of his handiwork are visible in every direction. Altogether "every prospect pleases" and man is not quite vile!

BURBANK

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, of Saugus, have moved to Burbank to make their home.

Wilson Glenn returned to Washington, Saturday, where he will remain for some time.

Rev. F. Pomeroy has returned home from several days' vacation at the mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Fawkes will leave the first of the week for a short business trip to San Francisco.

D. O. Shields and Walter Cunningham attended the Holiness Camp meeting at Sawtelle, Thursday.

A. Shillings will leave for Lake Tahoe, San Francisco and Washington, Saturday, to be absent about a month.

The conference has returned Rev. J. H. Avery here for the coming year. It was the people's wish that he hsould be returned here.

Mrs. Laas, of Chicago, and Miss Minnie Kalberlah, of Los Angeles, have returned home from a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Luttge, sr.

June Story has sold out his half interest in the butcher shop to Mr. Bernard, of Toluca, who took possession at once. June will still remain a month in the shop.

Miss Nellie Harris' horse became frightened Tuesday evening at some rubish piled on Second street. Miss Harris was thrown from the buggy and received a number of bruises. The horse ran up the railroad track and fell in such a way that its leg was broken. It was not found until morning and had to be shot then, as it could not walk.

While Harry Danning and Victor Lemar were at Catalina, Sunday last, Harry had the chance to show what a fine swimmer he was. While two girls were out rowing the boat turned over and Harry seeing their danger, immediately swam out and rescued them to firm land again. He refrained from telling this, but it has been found out and it shows what a hero he is.

Fire broke out in Geo. H. Wood's dry goods store, Tuesday evening, damaging a large part of the stock. Several persons were in the store when the blaze was discovered and by quick work soon extinguished the flames by tearing down the goods and carrying them out with forks, while two streams of water kept the walls and floor from burning. For some time it seemed that the entire block would be burned. About $150 worth of goods was lost. The stock was insured.

Mrs. McCarthy, assisted by her daughter, Miss Noami, were hostesses at a progressive euchre party at their home, Saturday evening. Mrs. Chas. B. Fischer received ladies' first prize and Miss Minnie Shilling won the consolation. Mr. Rosecup won gentleman's first prize, and Mr. Coon the consolation. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Chas. B. Fischer, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Fischer, Mr. and Brs. Orth, Mesdames Gillen and Touchette, Miss Minnie Shillings, Messrs. Coon, Rosecup, Earle Dafur and Fay Touchette.

Harry Hixon entertained the Palm Leaf Club at his home, Saturday evening. The following officers were elected: Fletcher Pomeroy, president; Faith Sence, vice president; Urania Edmunds, secretary; Harry Hixon, treasurer. Games and dainty refreshments were enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. Nickerson, Mr. and Mrs. Jake Swall, Misses Cora and Gladys Meyers, Emma Riddell, June Luttge, Emma Perry, Urania Edmunds, Lizzie Johnson, Clara Clarke, Faith Sence, Lillie Eustice, Messrs. Cloyd Ogier, Ray Sence, Henry Story, Fletcher Pomeroy, Chester Craig, George Rummel, Will Hoist and Blake Kendall.
